

Air Conditioning Tips

AC systems are designed for a maximum cooling that will maintain the indoor temperature 15-20 degrees below the outdoor temperature. They work by pulling moisture, as well as heat, out of the air, so on muggy days the system may not seem to cool as well as on dry days.

Don't turn the system on and off if humid weather is expected.

Instead, turn the system on before the apartment becomes too moist. Set the thermostat at the desired comfort level and leave the fan on "auto" If it gets too chilly, turn the temperature up a degree or two at a time until the desired level of comfort is achieved. Do not turn off the system during the hot weather. If you do, it will take several hours and more energy to cool off the apartment again.
